Background and content of Electoral Registers

This guide covers Electoral Registers held by Staffordshire & Stoke on Trent Archive Service. It does not cover Poll Books which are a separate source.

Parliamentary representation dates back to the thirteenth century with English counties and most English boroughs electing two or more MPs (Members of Parliament). However it was not until the Representation of the People Act 1832 also known as the Great Reform Act that the franchise was extended and electoral registers were first created.

Before 1832, Staffordshire was represented by two M.P.s for the county and two M.P.s for each of four parliamentary boroughs (Stafford, Lichfield, Newcastle and Tamworth). The Representation of the People Acts of 1832, 1867, 1918, 1945, the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1884, and boundary commission reviews of later dates all made changes in the number and boundaries of parliamentary constituencies. The major changes were in the increased representation of manufacturing towns such as Stoke-on-Trent, Wolverhampton and Walsall, and in the decision to create constituencies roughly equal in population.

Electoral registers are lists of persons entitled to vote compiled annually. Before 1918 they include the nature of the qualification of each person which entitled them to vote. Draft registers were compiled by parish overseers and town clerks, and later by electoral registration officers. Anyone might then object to someone's name appearing on the list, or appeal against their name not being included. Other sources were also checked so that persons having died or moved from the area could be removed from the register.

Qualifications to vote

Before 1832 the County M.P.s were elected by males aged 21 and over, owning freehold land worth £2 net per annum, while the boroughs had various different systems for electing M.P.s. Approximately 1% of the adult population was entitled to vote.

The Representation of the People Acts of 1832, 1867 and 1884 extended the franchise (right to vote) to more and more of the male population, although it was always based on the ownership or tenancy of land of a specified annual value. Despite these changes by 1911 only 58% of adult males were registered as electors.

The Representation of the People Act, 1918, gave the vote to all males aged 21 and over, and to women aged 30 and over who were, or whose husbands were, local government electors. In 1928 all women aged 21 and over were given the vote. In 1948 the business and university franchise was abolished, leaving just residential franchise and fully establishing one person one vote system. The final major change came in 1967, when the voting age for men and women was reduced to 18.

Main Disqualifications : convicted prisoners, lunatics, peers, peeresses (except 1918 - 1963), paupers (pre-1918), policemen (pre-1887), postmasters and some revenue officers (pre-1918), conscientious objectors (1918 - 1923).

By the 1890s there were several sections of papers for each place, by the different forms of qualification, divided between those registered from the previous year who were carried forward unless objected to, and new claimants, and divided as to whether they were qualified for both Parliamentary and local elections or one of these only. Thus there are separate lists for ownership voters, ownership claimants, occupier claimants for both Parliamentary and local elections, for only Parliamentary and for only local elections, and also lists of lodgers who qualified through their local residence. These latter include a description of the residence based on the number of rooms and floors their rooms occupied, their rent, and the name of their landlord.

Note, people may not always be listed under the place where they appeared to live. For example in Stafford, the burgesses had an acre of land on Coton Field which gave them entitlement to vote, but these burgesses appear in the lists not under Stafford where they probably lived, but under Hopton & Coton. Some people were entitled to more than one vote if they lived in one area but owned property in a second area. Only in the case of qualification by occupation of rented property could a person be challenged if non-resident.

Arrangement of electoral registers

The registers are made up of lists of voters for each parish or township, and parishes and townships are arranged in alphabetical order within each constituency (1832 - 1841 within each hundred). Voters are listed in alphabetical order within each parish or township, together with their place of abode, the nature of their qualification to vote, the location of the property entitling them to vote, and the names of tenants of the property, if any.

1918-1974

The registers are made up of lists of voters for each polling district, which are arranged by the reference letter of the polling district, and then bound into volumes for each constituency. Voters are generally arranged by streets, which are listed in alphabetical order within each polling district. However, in some cases, particularly in sparsely populated rural areas, alphabetical order by surname was retained. Addresses are given, but universal male suffrage made the other information given before 1918 obsolete.

1975-2000

Since 1975 the Staffordshire Record Office has received electoral registers not on the basis of whole constituencies, but of entire district council areas (which in some cases are co-terminous with constituencies). Some district councils including Lichfield and East Staffordshire have deposited their electoral registers with local libraries rather than with the Record Office.

Dating of electoral registers

Some 19th century electoral registers appear to be catalogued with the wrong year. This is because the registers were used as the basis for the new list of the following year, and contain later annotations including the next year's date. As a general rule, the year in which the original list was compiled has been used for the correct date. Confusingly, a few years in the 1890s have title pages giving the following year (this has happened at least for 1892-1894 which have the title pages of 1893-1895 respectively). The date of compilation was normally around July, and it is presumed these would remain in force for the following twelve months, but no formal start date is given.

This system changed after the production of bound volumes in 1918. The qualifying date for electoral registration for most of the 20th century was in October, with the electoral registers coming into force the following February and remaining in force for twelve months. The identifying year given to these registers is the date of the February when they came into force.

Boundary problems

One of the most difficult aspects of using electoral registers is the uncertainty over some constituency boundaries. Very often, constituency boundaries were drawn along main roads, so a single place across a main road could be split across two or more constituencies. This is most notorious around the urban areas of the West Midlands, but also affects the areas around the edges of the Stoke on Trent urban area, where such places were in fact still under the more rural Parliamentary constituencies surrounding the city, although they might be part of the City for municipal elections. For instance the most southern parts of Newcastle-under-Lyme urban area such as Clayton and Westlands are still listed under Stone constituency as late as the 1940s, while places such as Milton and Abbey Hulton came under the Leek constituency.

From 1984, responsibility for electoral registration passed to local authorities, and the registers from that date are compiled for the relevant council area, which may or may not be co-terminous with a constituency boundary. Therefore the registers for some districts may contain areas that cross into two or more constituencies. This guide states the relevant local authority area, as this is how the registers are identified.

Arrangement of the guide

This guide is arranged by the office within the Archive Service holding electoral registers. It does not cover registers held by local libraries or by other archive services in parts of Staffordshire which now come under the West Midlands. Within each office the guide is arranged by place (in bold) and gives the constituency this place came under at certain periods and the years held. The guide then indicates where the original registers are held and what is available on microfiche.

Electoral registers for the districts of Stoke on Trent and Newcastle-under-Lyme are not as a rule held at Staffordshire Record Office for any years after 1908, but there are the exceptions of the year 1876/77 for Stoke on Trent and the year 1977/78 for Newcastle-under-Lyme.

A series of duplicate registers for the Wolverhampton constituencies are also held at Staffordshire Record Office for the years 1968-1987.

Gaps in holdings

There are significant gaps in holdings for some areas for some years. These predominantly affect urban areas for the years between the two World Wars. It is thought that they were probably used for paper salvage.

Other gaps for whole years are as follows:

1836, Pirehill and Totmonslow Hundreds (except Cheadle)

1834 Cuttlestone West Hundred

1882, all constituencies

1885, Kingswinford, West and North-West Staffordshire constituencies

1886, West and North-West Staffordshire

1889-1890, all constituencies

1909-[1915], all constituencies

In addition, some individual places simply appear to be missing from their constituency bundles. These have been checked to a certain extent, but it is possible that some may yet be found for instance with the list for the following year, as the previous year's list was the basis for the next year. Indeed, two whole sets of years were discovered within the bundles for the next year or two (North Staffordshire 1848 contains the list for 1847, and South Staffordshire 1847 contains the list for 1849).

Holdings elsewhere

Some local libraries hold registers for the other borough constituencies and local divisions of the county constituencies. For location of these see Gibson, J. and Rogers, Colin, Electoral Registers since 1832; and Burgess Rolls, (Federation of Family History Societies, 1990).

In addition the British Library has received a complete set of registers for the whole of the United Kingdom since 1947 and has other holdings of earlier registers. These are listed in Richard H A Cheffins, Parliamentary Constituencies and their registers since 1832 (British Library 1998) available at Staffordshire Record Office. The British Library also has a guide on its website:

<http://www.bl.uk/reshelp/findhelprestype/offpubs/electreg/electoral.html>

Location of current electoral registers

For years later than those covered by this guide, the first place to check is the main library for each district, as these normally hold each current year and have retained the registers for previous years. After a change in the law in 2001 two versions of the electoral register were produced from 2002, a full version and an edited version. Inclusion in the full register is compulsory by law. The full register gives details of the name and address of every UK citizen who is eligible to vote. People have the choice of whether or not they wish to be included in the edited version, which can be made available and purchased for any purpose. This means that access to the full register is strictly controlled and they are not normally available to the public for a period of ten years apart from checking one's own entry.

Consulting Electoral Registers

As part of a long - term preservation measure, the Archive Service is gradually microfilming the registers of electors from 1832. As these are filmed, microfiche copies will become available for self-service consultation at the Staffordshire Record Office, Lichfield Record Office, Stoke on Trent City Archives and Burton upon Trent Family and Local History Centre. This guide indicates the covering dates for the microfiche holdings as well as the original register holdings. To consult microfiche copies of the registers you will need to book a microfiche reader in advance. The original registers are ordered on document request slips within the Archive Service advertised times of production.

Please note that, although registers of electors may be freely consulted and notes taken from them, the Archive Service does not supply photocopies from original registers except for legal reasons.
